

Bayberry

“This year, I asked to be included in answering this question. Other years I have said I didn’t want to. It’s just that I didn’t know what to say. It has been hard for me to trust that people would keep their word and let me stay here. I have never in my life stayed in one place very long. So I stopped trying to get attached. I had my heart broken too many times. People think I am weird but that’s just because I haven’t really let them see who I really am. I’m ready to try something different now. Maybe I can contribute something. I’ve just not felt I had anything to give. I live with a lot of other horses who have so many human friends who visit them. They are smart horses. Some are actually very wise and I don’t really know what to do with them. I’m just a simple horse really. And I can be kind of shut down when I get scared. Recently, I began to look at things a little differently. I’m trying some new things out. I am grateful for everything I have. I have lived through a lot of turmoil and been with people who truly didn’t care if I was alive or not. But now, I’m in a place where people care. That is truly amazing and I am finally opening up my heart to be a part of it all.”
