

Nell

"I love the gentle touch of humans and to feel loved and appreciated. This is a new experience for me in this life and I am soaking it all up. My heart is eager to absorb as much love as I can and to give it back to all who wish to share with me. It doesn't matter that I am missing an eye. My life is so rich and full now. When I had two eyes, I saw so much darkness in the world. I watched a lot of things I wish I had never had to see. But then I ended up here in a peaceful, loving, and bright place. There is no more darkness. I see more beauty now through one eye that I never got to see with two. Sometimes I stand here among my friends and just listen to them breathe. I am grateful for every breath we share. I wish you humans would also take a moment to close your eyes and just feel peace. If you felt peace more within your hearts, there would be more peace around you. You carry so much light, if you would just let that be who you really are. I love the humans in my life now. And I will share as much of my heart as I can so that we can all enjoy even a moment of peace and light."
